Shipyard secures deal for two tankers

Months after fears arose briefly for Aker Shipyard's future amid need for a state bailout, Aker yesterday signed a letter of intent with SeaRiver Maritime, an Exxon Mobil-owned company, for construction of two crude oil tankers.

The deal is reportedly worth hundreds of millions of dollars and more than 1,000 local jobs.

"These new vessels will provide jobs for American shipyard workers and help support energy needs along the U.S. West Coast for decades," SeaRiver President Will Jenkins said in a statement.

These tankers will be used to carry oil from Alaska to the West Coast and are outfitted with energy efficient systems and produce lower air emissions that required by law. Construction begins next year.

The 820-foot vessels, each with a capacity of 730,000 barrels, will be delivered in 2014. They will replace two existing double-hull tankers. The new vessels will be used to carry Alaskan crude from Prince William Sound, Alaska, to West Coast destinations. YOTAM DROR

No longer secret, Devil's Pool shut

● Swimming hole in northwest Philadelphia's Wissahickon Valley Park got too popular ● Police began enforcing rule against going in water

For years, police officers and park rangers turned a blind eye to almost everyone who made their way through the woods for a dip into Wissahickon Valley Park's little secret, Devil's Pool.

But too much hot weather and too much press, most notably a four-column photograph across the top of The New York Times last Wednesday, attracted too much attention to the watering hole off Wissahickon Creek this weekend. Large crowds forced city police to finally end swimming in the pool.

"We're there policing to make sure people are not swimming. Everyone wants to dive into it like it's Myrtle Beach," said a 14th District officer. "This is not Atlantic City where you're supposed to be diving and so forth. It's not that type of party."

Nowhere in the city's Fairmount Park system is swimming actually allowed, according to Friends of the Wissahickon Executive Director Maura McCarthy.

"With all that press, then 100 degree temperatures, the officers felt they had no choice about enforcing the hard-nosed rules," McCarthy said of complete closure of Devil's Pool.

She recommended against swimming in the creek whether police enforce the park's policy or not because this time of year, the creek water at Devil's Pool is typically 90 percent recycled human wastewater.

"The stream is a lot healthier than 10 years ago, but still has a lot of challenges," McCarthy said. "I wouldn't want my dog swimming in there."

Volunteers wanted

Friends of the Wissahickon park advocacy leaders routinely hold volunteer cleanups in the park that spans neighborhoods like Roxborough and Chestnut Hill, McCarthy said.

Her group also subsidized police coverage of the park for the last five years. This weekend, the police department went beyond its traditional coverage of the Devil's Pool and surrounding park area.

Followers, yes, but real friends?

Philly-based app developer tests how well you know Twitter followers Game is online social barometer

Having a large number of Twitter followers may be a self-esteem booster, but it is definitely a disadvantage in a new iPhone app created by local developer Mike Zornek of software company Clickable Bliss.

TwizShow, available for 99 cents at the iTunes app store, quizzes you about your followers with '80s-game-show-style animation, asking multiple-choice questions such as whose avatar is being displayed and who authored a particular tweet.

"I know a lot of users who play the game and they only follow 20, 30 or 40 people and you can tell because their scores are really high and they know their networks well," said Zornek. "People with the lowest scores have the most followers and don't know them. If you play the game like two or three times, you'll definitely have a sense of how well you know your followers."

But does this mean intensive Tweeters are more isolated from friends in their nonvirtual social lives?

"No, they're definitely more social in real life," said social media expert Sonny Ahuja. "I have seen that from my own networking events: People who are more socially friendly are usually the most active on Twitter."

Forensic experts take stand

PERUGIA, ITALY. Independent forensic experts took the stand yesterday to attack key pieces of evidence used to convict U.S. student Amanda Knox of the murder of her British roommate in Perugia in 2007.

Thousands join Oslo march in grief, unity

100,000 gather to remember victims ◗ Attacker claims help, but officials skeptical ◗ Rally likely country's largest since World War II

At least 100,000 people rallied in Oslo and tens of thousands more marched in cities across Norway yesterday in a nationwide expression of grief and unity over the massacre of 76 people by Anders Behring Breivik.

Breivik told a judge in a closed hearing yesterday his bombing and shooting rampage aimed to save Europe from a Muslim takeover, and said that "two more cells" existed in his group.

Police said they could not rule out the possibility that others were involved in Friday's attacks and they revised down the death toll to 76 from 93: eight dead in a bomb blast in Oslo and 68 at a Labour Party youth camp on Utoeya island.

Stoltenberg addressed the evening crowd, many of them holding up red and white roses for remembrance, his voice trembling with emotion: "By taking part you are saying a resounding 'yes' to democracy." He called the Rose March a "march for democracy, a march for tolerance, a march for unity."

"Evil can kill a person but never conquer a people."

In a country of 4.8 million, where a single murder makes front-page news, the solidarity rally was probably the biggest since World War II. REUTERS

Doubt cast on gunman's claim of accomplices

Norwegian police think gunman Anders Behring Breivik is probably a lone wolf, a view also held by some researchers who cast doubt on his claim that he was working with two other cells.

Breivik, who admitted to carrying out a bomb attack and shooting spree last Friday that killed 76 people, told a court yesterday that two cells of collaborators were in his "Knights Templar" group that aimed to "save" Europe from Muslims.

Earlier, Breivik maintained he acted alone.

Police attorney Christian Hatlo told reporters yesterday that he "cannot completely, and I stress completely, rule out that others were involved in what happened." REUTERS

More updates

- A Norwegian court yesterday decided to detain self-confessed gunman Anders Behring Breivik for eight weeks during a police investigation of the attacks. The court agreed to keep Breivik in solitary confinement with a ban on letters, access to media and visitors. He would be held in the strictest isolation for at least four weeks.
- Norwegian police said Breivik had said during interrogation that he was prepared to spend the rest of his life in prison.
- Discovery Channel has commissioned a one-hour documentary about Friday's tragedy in Norway that will air in select international markets in August, the network announced yesterday.
- Judge Kim Heger said Breivik had accused the ruling Labour Party of betraying Norway with "mass imports of Muslims." He said his attacks were aimed at deterring future recruitment to the party.

Rival debt plans pushed as time flies by

Top U.S. lawmakers rolled out dueling debt plans yesterday that offered little prospect for compromise, increasing the threat of a ratings downgrade and national default, as President Barack Obama prepared to address Americans on the impasse.

Little more than a week before the Aug. 2 deadline to raise the $14.3 trillion U.S. debt ceiling, Republican and Democratic leaders traded blame in an acrimonious standoff as they pursued separate budget proposals, with no clear path to bring them together.

The stalemate rattled investors worldwide, sending stocks and the dollar down and pushing gold to a record high, but falling far short of the panicky sell-off that some politicians had feared. REUTERS

No word yet on Winehouse death

Cause of death for drug addicted singer still not clear ◗ Parents visit memorial site ◗ Malicious link on Web

A post-mortem examination on singer Amy Winehouse failed to determine how she died and more toxicology tests are being carried out, with the results expected in two to four weeks, police said yesterday.

The autopsy was carried out after an inquest into the 27-year-old's death opened and adjourned.

The "Back to Black" singer, who has fought drug and alcohol addictions, was found dead at her north London home Saturday afternoon.

As sales of Winehouse's music soared and speculation swirled about the release of a possible posthumous album, her father Mitch visited a growing shrine outside the house.

Surrounded by television crews, well-wishers, and a swarm of teddy bears, flowers and the occasional bottle of booze, he read the dozens of condolence messages left for Amy. REUTERS

Don't click that link!

NEW YORK. Just a few hours after Winehouse was found dead on Saturday, scammers launched a campaign to capitalize on her death.

Several links to videos popped up on Facebook over the weekend purportedly showing Winehouse in the moments before her death, but when users clicked the link, they were directed to fill out an online survey. At the same time, the link led to a pop-up message that duped users into sharing the link to the faux video with their contacts on the social networking site. MAINSTREET.COM

'Dog' boned

DENVER. Celebrity bounty hunter Duane "Dog" Chapman received a scathing public rebuke from a western Colorado sheriff, who accused the flamboyant reality TV star of reckless showmanship in bringing his latest bail-jumper to justice.

Mesa County Sheriff Stan Hilkey said Chapman engaged in "profit-driven peacockery" and disregarded public safety when he delivered the injured 29-year-old fugitive to the county jail last week while TV cameras rolled.

"While Dog stayed outside, shirtless and sweaty, prancing back and forth waving his golden locks for the camera, his team brought this freshly pepper-sprayed fellow into the enclosed space of the Sheriff's Office lobby with other citizens present," Hilkey wrote in a blog posting. REUTERS

No boundaries for this vampire couple

"True Blood" star Anna Paquin admits being married to co-star Stephen Moyer makes filming intimate scenes easier.

"Maybe it should be weird, simulating sex with your husband in front of people? But it's really not," Paquin tells V Magazine. "When it's a love scene with someone you actually love, there's no feeling like, 'Can I touch him here? Can I touch him there?' You know what your boundaries are — or what they aren't, I suppose."

What's most impressive is that Paquin, after all of those years of being together, is able to pretend like she still wants to rip his pants off instead of pretending to have a headache.

'Glee' stars to become townies?

So ... it might be time to stop believin', kiddos.

While "Glee" boss Ryan Murphy recently said stars Lea Michele, Cory Monteith and Emmy-nominee Chris Colfer would be leaving the show after next season, that may not actually be the case. "Here's the exact thing: [The characters] are seniors, so they're graduating," executive producer Brad Falchuk told the the audience at the show's Comic-Con panel, according to TV Line. "But because they're graduating doesn't mean they're leaving the show. If you have Lea Michele under contract, you don't say, 'We're gonna let you go.'"

Oh man — you know what happens if you don't leave town after graduation: You become that townie burnout, a la Matthew McConaughey in "Dazed and Confused." I can't wait for the episode where Rachel, desperate for her high-school days and wanting to impress the new members of New Directions, starts belting out show tunes while buying Mad Dog 20/20 for underage high school students.

Lohan: Can't keep a good drunk down

Lindsay Lohan seems to be slipping back into bad habits, if a night out in Hollywood is any indication. The troubled starlet hit up a friend's birthday, showing up sober and only ordering juice from the waitstaff, but by the end of the night "she could barely stand," an eyewitness tells Radar Online. The source says Lohan sneaked gulps of other people's drinks while passing them on and taking shots of vodka on the sly. Lohan was later spotted holding onto curtains for support and screaming into her cell phone before she left the club around 2 a.m. "When she got to her Escalade, she just collapsed into it," the source says. Lohan, who is still on probation, is legally allowed to drink.

Celebrating sans husband

Divorce or no divorce, Jennifer Lopez was all smiles in Miami this weekend, celebrating her 42nd birthday with her mother, sister and a massive entourage, according to People magazine. "Jennifer looked radiant in a purple and silver evening dress," a source says. "And when they brought out her birthday cake after the meal, she began to sing. She was very happy. The whole group had a blast, staying for hours. They closed down the restaurant."

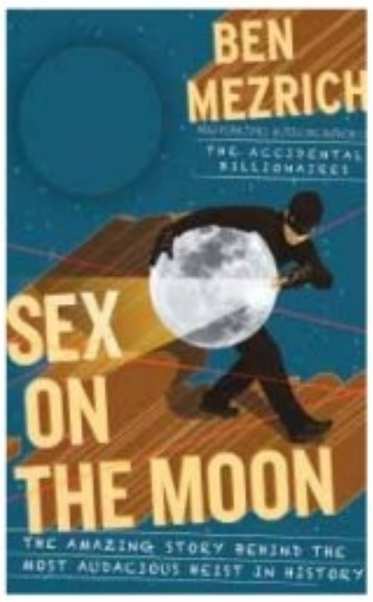
Getting your (moon) rocks off

▶ Thad Roberts while at NASA.

Best-selling author Ben Mezrich uncovers the story behind one of the most audacious heists in US history in his new book, 'Sex on the Moon'

Moon rocks are otherworldly and illegal to own — and they're also among the most valuable elements in the world. A single gram is worth around $5 million. Enter Thad Roberts, a 25-year-old NASA co-op who stole a safe of lunar samples and then, along with his girlfriend/accomplice, did just what the title of Ben Mezrich's highly readable new book, "Sex on the Moon," suggests. Mezrich, the best-selling author behind "Bringing Down the House," and "The Accidental Billionaires" (from which the Oscar-winning "The Social Network" is adapted), uncovers just how Roberts was both brilliant and stupid enough to mastermind one of most daring thefts in American history.



How did you come about Thad's story?

I've become the go-to guy for interesting stories. Mutual friends of Thad who were fans of mine contacted me. I never heard of the heist. So I hopped on a plane and flew to Utah to meet Thad right after he spent seven and a half years in jail. He was one of the nicest, most charismatic guys I've ever met.

It seems like you had a lot more to work with in this — FBI files, interviews with Thad, etc. — than your other non-fiction works.

[The material] was thousands of pages — from what he had in his pockets when they arrested him to the transcripts of when they took him down. In fact, the first thing Thad says when he sits down with an undercover FBI agent is: "If you're wearing a wire, I'm screwed." I mean, come on: That makes for a great book.

There are so many over-the-top elements to the story, but what was the one thing that surprised even you?

Even to this day, I don't understand how Thad could be so brilliant in pulling it off but then he just tried to sell the moon rocks on the Internet. He just wasn't a criminal. A criminal would know better.

What walls remember

How Tatiana de Rosnay turned French history into 'Sarah's Key' The author on adapting her novel for the big screen and keeping Harvey Weinstein happy

Author Tatiana de Rosnay's best-seller "Sarah's Key" uses an American journalist's curiosity about her own apartment to shed light on a shameful moment in French history, the 1942 Vel' d'Hiv roundup in Paris, during which French police voluntarily rounded up and arrested Jewish families. With the novel having been turned into a film starring Kristen Scott Thomas, de Rosnay sat down with Metro to discuss what walls remember and writing in different languages.

This deals with a piece of history audiences might not be familiar with. How is it to educate people in a way?

For me it was not a "holocaust novel" — although it is called that, and this is called a "holocaust movie." When I wrote it, I absolutely did not have the intentional of making it into a lesson.

This was your first book in English?

Published, yes, but not really, in the sense that when I started to write books, I was 11 years old and that was in English, and everything I wrote between the ages of 11 and 25 are in English. I wrote about 15 books which are never to be published because they're very bad — this sort of science-fiction stuff, detective novels, love stories.

Is there any difference to the experiences of writing in English versus French?

I grew up learning both languages at the same time. My father's French and my mother's English. I speak English to my son and French to my daughter, for some strange reason. It's actually very difficult for me to analyze why I write books in French or in English. All I know is that I wrote "Sarah's Key" in English because I had to put myself into my English side to write about that event in French history.

Q&A: Adapting

How was the adaptation process?

Well it went really well. [Screenwriter] Serge [Joncour] happens to be a very good friend of mine, so I felt immediately at ease and a sort of trustworthy atmosphere. And frankly, I wouldn't have come all the way from Paris, France, on this exhausting movie tour to tell you that I didn't like it.

Unless you really, really didn't like it.

Yeah, I suppose, but I don't think Harvey Weinstein would've liked that at all. It would've been a bit tricky.

JULIEN BOMET

Q&A: Curiosity

The history of apartments, what lives have been lived there, seems such fertile ground for storytelling.

All my books have that, every single book that I've written. It's one of my favorite obsessions, how walls remember. I'm sure some shrink would have some brilliant interpretation of why. I probably don't want to find out why, because if I do I'll probably tamper with all the internal mechanisms that make my imagination spring forward. My poor husband, whenever we're looking for a house, he says things like, "How much is the rent?" And I'm like, "What happened here? Did somebody commit suicide here?" I can feel it. If I walk in somewhere where somewhere horrible has happened, I can feel it.

Baldacci turning to family drama

David Baldacci is known for penning page-turners such as "The Simple Truth" and "The Sixth Man," in which he guides readers through mysteries at the highest levels of power.

But his latest novel, "One Summer," is a family drama. The book follows Jack Armstrong, a veteran of the Iraq and Afghanistan conflicts, as he tries to keep his family together following the death of his wife and his own battle with an illness.

"In some ways, it was liberating. I didn't have to lay out a lot of red herrings and clues. I could delve more deeply into the characters," Baldacci says about the stylistic departure. "I wrote short stories before I became a thriller writer, and their themes were more like the themes explored in 'One Summer.'" REUTERS

Just don't call it a rom-com

Justin Timberlake and Mila Kunis would prefer to think of their new film as a comedy with incidental romance Despite similarities, stars say 'Friends with Benefits' isn't the same as 'No Strings Attached'

SONY

OK, we're just going to say it: This here looks like a straight-up rom-com.

Justin Timberlake and Mila Kunis want people talking about their new movie, "Friends with Benefits." Just don't call it a rom-com.

"We always thought of it more as comedy than a romantic comedy," says Kunis. "If anything, it was a buddy comedy with a little romance in it. Because you care about the characters and you watch the characters fall in love, but it's not your stereotypical romantic comedy."

Timberlake is on the same page about the film, about two love-weary friends who embark on a sexual relationship without all that messy romance stuff. "I don't know that we've ever treated it like a romantic comedy or a slacker comedy. To me, funny is funny and not funny is not funny," he says. "And so we just wanted to find the funny in all these situations, and that's how we treated this."

"Friends with Benefits" marks a major milestone for both Timberlake and Kunis, as it's the first time either has top-lined a film. The lead has to come with new pressures, but Timberlake insists they're quickly pushed aside. "We deal with those demons before we sign contracts. After you commit to the movie, you have to let all that stuff go," he says, though he admits having Kunis along for the ride was a huge help. "That was a little bit of a comfort, knowing that you were going to be sharing the whole movie with a counterpart," he adds. "There's never a moment in this movie where it's just one of us out there by ourselves."

The great debate

Have we seen this before?

Though the premise of "Friends With Benefits" sounds similar to the plot of Natalie Portman and Ashton Kutcher's "No Strings Attached," Kunis says she doesn't care: "There's only so many original stories to be told in the world."

Timberlake insists the two films are different. "While I think that's a great movie, I don't think our movie is anything like it," he says. "But sometimes you're subject to the bulls— that [journalists] put us through." Yowch.

in vitro fertilization

For the best IVF success, don't worry, be happy

Enrolling in a stress-management class might help women undergoing in vitro fertilization get pregnant, according to a May study.

The finding is in line with other recent work suggesting that stress relief might up the success rate for women who have trouble conceiving.

"Women who are in infertility treatment do report huge amounts of stress," Courtney Lynch, the head of reproductive epidemiology at Ohio State University, said in May. "One of the reasons IVF is not as effective as we'd like it to be is that some couples don't make it to cycle 2 and cycle 3 because they're so stressed out."

While evidence has been mounting that high stress is linked with infertility, especially in women getting fertility treatment, Lynch described it as "a chicken and egg problem."

Alice Domar of Boston IVF, who ran the study with colleagues, said it makes sense that lots of stress can make it harder to conceive. After all, when our ancestors were overwhelmed by the difficulties of finding food and harsh conditions, it probably wasn't the best time to add a baby. REUTERS

Less success for the obese

Obese women undergoing IVF may be half as likely as their normal-weight counterparts to have a baby, a study at one medical center found.

Researchers at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston found that of 1,700 women who underwent IVF, those who were obese were up to 50 percent less likely to become pregnant or give birth.

Doc: 'Age predicts success'

Prominent Philly IVF doctor gives her take on process Talks insurance and how Pa. residents aren't as fortunate as NJ residents

Dr. Maureen Kelly is board certified in obstetrics and gynecology as well as reproductive endocrinology and infertility. She founded Society Hill Reproductive Medicine in 2010 after practicing in Philadelphia for 18 years. Dr. Kelly formerly served as medical director of the IVF program at Pennsylvania Reproductive Associates at The Women's Institute.

What are the financial costs, and do most insurance plans cover them?

The cost in general can range somewhere around $12,000-$15,000 per cycle, but there are some policies that do cover IVF. In certain states, for example New Jersey, IVF is mandated to be covered in most situations. Pennsylvania is not one of those states.

What about the risk of multiple pregnancies, Octomom-style?

That depends on the number of embryos that you replace. There are guidelines in place by the American Society for Reproductive Medicine to help guide reproductive endocrinologists so we can decrease the number of multiple pregnancies. Octomom's doctor did not follow them. IVF actually gives you a great amount of control, because you know how many embryos you are putting back into the uterus. But when you stimulate someone through fertility medications, you can't say exactly how many eggs will be mature and can be fertilized through intercourse.

What is the success rate?

Kelly

The age of the woman is the No. 1 factor that predicts success. You see about a 50-60 percent chance of conception per cycle for women who are 34 and under, for those 34-37 it's 40 percent — and over age 40, it's 25 percent.

Let the Weight Be Over

"Unlike most people struggling with morbid obesity, I did not find myself hindered by diabetes, hypertension, sleep apnea, or any of the illnesses that strike the obese. What I did have was a family history of diabetes, hypertension, sleep apnea, and arthritis – brought on by obesity – and a personal history of unsuccessful attempts at conventional weight loss methods.

Celeb culture rots the brain

I read the Metro almost every day on the way to work. Today, however, I felt compelled to tell you how monumentally disappointed I was to see Amy Winehouse gracing the cover. I flipped through several pages before finally finding any reference to the horrible tragedy that occurred in Norway. Are we so celebrity brain-dead that the death of one starlet dwarfs the terrorizing and killing of dozens of defenseless children at camp on an island?
HEIDI BECKER, VIA E-MAIL

Some backlash from the Right

RE: "STUCK IN THE MIDDLE": Frankly humorous how your letters page has all negative comments regarding "Republicans," "Tea Party" and corporations. Why not simply declare that yours is a marxist or Democratic Party newspaper and be done with it? Frankly there is more than enough blame to go around for all sides in this economic mess! For far too long America has been living on credit and well beyond its means.
RICHARD J. LERMAN, VIA E-MAIL

Oh stop it! The Tea Party has nothing to do with it. You want to place blame for no jobs growth and unemployment? Look at the EPA, which has shut down more jobs in two years than any agency in history with regulation. The war on carbon is killing this country, not the Tea Party!
BUTCH CASS, VIA E-MAIL

As a Republican, I say, how simple is the idea that everyone who is a member of this country pays the same percentage of taxes? How do the privileged get even more privilege? Why isn't every one of us who is exempt from the tax exemptions writing and demanding our representatives to ensure everyone pays the same percentage of taxes?! My Republican representatives are not speaking for the 95 percent of us Americans who pay more taxes than the 5 percent rich! But it seems no one else gives a damn!

Why are my views so small?

RE: "SOME PROTEST IS WELCOME": I'm against gay marriage because I think it's wrong. How come my opinion is looked at as hate, small minded, bigoted and so on? Men and women are like puzzles. If the "pieces" don't fit together then you're putting the piece in the wrong spot.
MIKE ONEILL, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Be as generous with your funds as people have been with you in the past. Consider purchasing some things that would provide a lot of pleasure for others.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Even though the job at hand might be unusually tough to do, continue to work with a flourish. It'll impress others as to how well you handle rough assignments.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. If you want to make an impact, let others think your ideas came from them. You'll be able to be more effective pulling the strings from the background than from a visible position.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. This can be an especially good cycle for accomplishing your hopes and expectations, so make the most of it. Don't let anybody with a negative attitude influence your mindset.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Focus your attention on accomplishing your most desirable objectives at this time. Regardless of the impediments involved, you have the ability to get what you're after.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. If some of your associates aren't in accord with your way of thinking, don't knock yourself out trying to convince them. Quietly go about doing what you believe to be necessary.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Don't hesitate to rely upon a loyal associate if you lack the wherewithal to handle something important. Select someone who you know can help.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Fairness and tact are two of your greatest assets, which you'll use quite wisely. Others will respond in kind when they see you are doing your best.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Continue to keep performing to the best of your abilities, because with the trends now favoring you, especially where your work is concerned, you can make substantial progress.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. If you're with an individual who you know to be on a tight budget, don't embarrass him or her by showing off how much you can spend. Be careful when handling money matters.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Should you find yourself in a situation that isn't likely to improve, do what you can to wrap it up instead of letting it hold you back. The sooner it's gone, the quicker you can make progress.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Trust on your own ideas instead of trying to seek approval from those who know little about what you're doing.

Opinion

ANGELO CATALDI
THE VOICE OF THE PHILLY SPORTS FAN

FINAL PIECE NOT WORTH ASKING PRICE

If a really stupid idea is repeated often enough, fans begin to accept it. Some even embrace it. And right now, the most idiotic whisper emanating from the Phillies' front office is that Vance Worley might be traded.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages. Opposing viewpoints are welcome. Send submissions to letters@metro.us.

Worley has been nothing short of spectacular in his first real test in the big leagues. He joined a short list of current and future Hall of Fame pitchers, who gave up one run or less in six consecutive starts. On a staff of aces, he has been the best starter for a full month.

Yet the clamor for a championship in 2011 is growing so loud that Worley could be packing his bags by Sunday's trade deadline — possibly to Houston in a deal for Hunter Pence. At least that's the latest story being suggested by the ever-growing army of "insiders" on the Internet, including top reporters like Buster Olney of ESPN and Todd Zolecki of MLB.com.

Well, here's one vote for keeping Worley, not just in a deal for Pence, but in a deal for anyone. Teams wait years, sometimes decades, for a young pitcher to come along and dominate the way Worley has. Not so many years ago, Roy Halladay was Vance Worley. So were Cliff Lee and Cole Hamels.

Granted, J.A. Happ was performing similar mound miracles two years ago, and Kyle Kendrick before that. The failure rate on projecting the success of young pitchers is high, yes, but not as high as the regret rate when a good, young pitcher becomes great for another team. With an aging staff, the Phils can't afford to sacrifice their future.

Worley doesn't light up a radar gun with 95-mile-an-hour heat or mystify with a stunning off-speed pitch. He dominates with something equally impressive: pure confidence. At 24, he doesn't just occupy the mound, he commands it. While Kendrick gets twitchy with men on base, Worley sneers.

Quoted

Three nicknames for a rookie has to be a record.

Worley has so captivated in his brief stay here that he already has three nicknames. First, it was "Frames" for his distinctive glasses. Then it was "El Vanimal" for his ferocious demeanor. And now, it's my own admittedly lame "Sir Vancelot," because of his warrior mentality. Three nicknames for a rookie has to be a record.

The real story of Vance Worley is a simple one. He is a young pitcher who has enjoyed stunning success on a staff of brilliant pitchers. His potential far exceeds a fine young talent like Pence, or any other players on the market.

The Phillies need to add one final piece to their excellent team, a right-handed hitting outfielder to bat behind Ryan Howard. But no hitter is worth losing Vance Worley. No hitter is worth risking the bright future symbolized by the fearless kid with the crazy glasses.

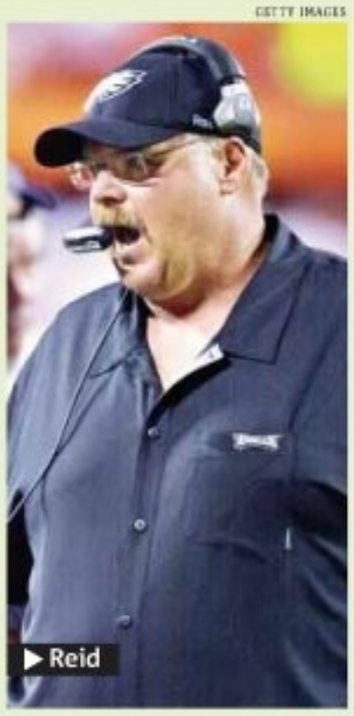
Big Red protects most, but not all

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Reid

When Kevin Kolb is traded to Arizona, Andy Reid will be losing his biggest and most clueless fan. Even though the coach broke his promise to give Kolb back the starting job, no one loves Reid more.

Speaking to Howard Eskin on the Dan Patrick radio show last week, Kolb said: "Andy is such an unselfish guy, and he doesn't have an ego. ... I have seen him take the bullet for so many players that the media has no idea about and the fans have no idea about."

Yes, Reid does take bullets for his players, but not all. After the playoff loss to Green Bay, the coach committed the most unconscionable act in the past decade. Reid said, "We can count. Those points would have helped," after David Akers missed two field goals in a five-point loss. A few days earlier, Akers had learned his daughter had cancer.

Michael Vick threw a season-ending pick in the final moments of that game. The offensive line was manhandled for 60 minutes. The red-zone defense remained pitiful. And Reid squandered timeouts and screwed up a challenge. But the only one getting a finger pointed at him was Akers.

To this day, Reid has provided nothing close to an explanation for that extraordinary lapse. In short, yes, Andy Reid has the back of most of his players. Unless he slides a knife in it the way he did with David Akers.

Sorry NFL, not buying your act

Before the NFL lockout, I was annoyed with the preening players and disgusted by the billionaire owners. Five months later, I feel betrayed and abused by both sides.

Remember, it all began when the owners pulled up in their chauffeur-driven limos at a meeting in March and cried poor. Decked out in beautifully-tailored suits, they claimed they couldn't make ends meet in the current system. Then they refused to back their claims by actually showing their books.

The players were at least more sympathetic, with the physical dangers they face and the strong limitations on the length of their careers. Of course, they embarked on a brilliant campaign to alienate the fans — first by hiring a confrontational labor boss, DeMaurice Smith, and then by dragging out the deal for an extra week for no good reason.

The bottom line on this appalling mess is that neither side cares at all about you. If they did, they would have found a common ground long before this. If they did, they would have avoided the layoffs and the missed paychecks of so many innocent bystanders — and prevented a lockout that was about ego and greed.

So I'm sitting out the high fives and cartwheels. When I watch the NFL, I will be cheering for the game, not the people.

Idle thoughts from Cataldi ...

1 Closing the door on future success? Is there any good reason why an unhittable Antonio Bastardo lost the closer's job to Ryan Madson over the weekend? Bastardo's awful performance Saturday in the eighth inning came courtesy of the lovable folk hero himself: his manager, Charlie Manuel.

2 You must be joking, right? Hey, I was willing to laugh at the notion of bringing NFL bad boy Albert Haynesworth to Philadelphia. I even cracked a smile that Plaxico Burress might go from prison to the Linc. But Brett Favre joining the Eagles as a backup QB? That's a joke, right? Please tell me it's a joke.

3 Contract year blues. In case you haven't noticed, Jimmy Rollins continues not to hustle even during his current hot streak at the plate. He barely made it to first on a double error last week. If Rollins refuses to play the game the right way in this final year of his contract, what will he do next season?

Comeback?

Truth be told
Sports talk radio lines were still lighting up about it yesterday, a day after a report said the Eagles were pursuing Brett Favre.

But Favre's agent, Bus Cook, tried to dispel the rumors, saying that Favre "hasn't talked to anybody else about a comeback."

The 41-year-old quarterback suffered through a dismal and injury-filled 2010, throwing 11 touchdowns against 19 interceptions.

Phillies looking for revenge on Giants?

Giants returning to town for NLCS rematch, possible preview Halladay, Lee won't pitch in three-game set

The San Francisco Giants.

You might remember them. They were the hitting-starved, band of misfits that stood no chance in last year's NLCS. Right? Then, they beat the Phillies in six games on their way to a World Series title.

Now, they're back for a three-game set at Citizens Bank Park that might serve as a preview for this year's NLCS. Once again, the Phillies are the favorites.

"We've got to play our best ball with the team they have [in Philadelphia] winning their division, the best record," Giants manager Bruce Bochy told MLB.com. "When you go in there, you better be on top of your game."

The Phils are 37-15 at home this season. Plus, there's that revenge thing.

"I don't walk around saying I want revenge on these guys," Shane Victorino said. "Revenge would be bringing the trophy back to Philly."

Of course, this won't be a true October preview, since Phillies aces Roy Halladay and Cliff Lee won't pitch this week. They have already taken their turn in the rotation.

"That's OK. They're not going anywhere," Phillies skipper Charlie Manuel said. "They'll be ready for the next team that comes in here, the Buckos." METRO

The Phils and Giants rank among the worst in MLB in team batting. However, they own the top two spots in team ERA.

- Phillies rank 18th in hitting with .250 average
- Giants rank 25th, at .243.
- Giants rank first in pitching with a team ERA of 3.08.
- Phils rank second, at 3.11

Let the games begin ... after a crazy preseason

NFL is officially in a speed rush ◗ The lockout is over ◗ But there isn't much time for moves, or even camp ◗ And don't even think about two-a-days

Imagine Eminem rapping over a techno beat.

That's what the next few days should feel like, now that the NFL has ended its five-month labor dispute. The timeline is fast and furious as teams try to cram days into hours and weeks into days.

"This is a long time coming, and football's back," commissioner Roger Goodell said yesterday.

As you read this, trades are being pursued, free agents are being wooed and draft picks are getting playbooks. The schedule for acquiring new players has been shrunk from a month to just 10 days.

Coaches will have less than three weeks to make key personnel and strategic moves. Who goes? Who stays? What kind of defensive scheme? The NFL is officially in a speed rush.

And training camp ... well, that starts tomorrow for some teams. Of course, that will also have a different look. Under the new CBA, traditional two-a-days are banned, meaning teams can no longer pound each other to a pulp. If they choose to practice twice a day, the second one will be without pads — no exceptions. It's part of the league's new player safety guidelines. ● MIKE GREGER

Timeline

Today
Draft picks and rookie free agents can be signed. Veteran free-agent and trade talks can begin.

Tomorrow
Training camp opens for 10 teams, including the Eagles

Thursday
Teams can cut players.

Friday
Teams can extend offer sheets, finalize FA signings.

▶ NFLPA executive director DeMaurice Smith and NFL commissioner Roger Goodell were in high spirits yesterday.

For the taking

These three players are going to be getting a lot of calls this week.

Kevin Kolb
QB, Eagles
The Eagles backup is probably being fitted for a new jersey right now. Arizona is most likely, but Seattle is possible.

Santonio Holmes
WR, Jets
His combo of blazing speed and skilled route-running makes Holmes a certified playmaker.

Nnamdi Asomugha
CB, Raiders
Looking to become top-paid corner in NFL — again. He's been thrown at just 92 times over past four seasons. He'd be a perfect fit in Philadelphia or Baltimore. ● METRO/MG

Kolb set to learn final destination?

Kevin Kolb could be signing the mortgage on his new home right now.

With the NFL lockout over, teams may begin trading today. All indications are the Eagles want to waste no time in dealing their backup quarterback. The rumor with the most legs has Kolb headed to Arizona for Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie and a draft pick. The Cardinals cornerback appeared on 610 WIP radio yesterday, but didn't say much.

"I just play it by ear, man, but whatever happens, happens," Rodgers-Cromartie said. "As far as just the atmosphere itself [in Philadelphia], yeah, that would [excite me]."

While a potential Kolb to Arizona deal hasn't been confirmed, the quarterback was seen playing catch with Cardinals receiver Larry Fitzgerald earlier this month.

"Arizona would be a great place. I've obviously envisioned myself there," Kolb said last week.

Calls to Kolb's agent, Jeff Nalley, weren't immediately returned. MIKE GREGER

Reid, Birds 'excited' to get it going

The Eagles are officially open for business.

Players are allowed to report to the NovaCare Complex today for voluntary strength and conditioning, and training camp will open tomorrow at Lehigh University.

The Eagles sent out a letter to fans yesterday thanking them for their patience and support throughout the NFL lockout.

"Even during the lockout, we kept working through the summer knowing we had to be ready for this moment — to go from zero to 100 mph overnight," said team president Joe Banner. "Now we have to be quick learners, and quick to act."

"We're studying the new contract hard so we can make good football decisions fast."
JOE BANNER, EAGLES PRESIDENT

The Eagles open the preseason Aug. 11 against Baltimore at Lincoln Financial Field. The team opens the regular season on the road, Sept. 11, at St. Louis.

"We understand that we have a lot of work ahead of us in order to get ready for the season opener at St. Louis, and I'm excited to get started on that as soon as we can," coach Andy Reid said. ● MIKE GREGER

Research Sleep Study

Teenagers between the ages of 12-16 are needed for a study that will help us better understand sleep in adolescents. Your teen does not need to have sleep problems to be included in this study.

The study involves two nights in the sleep lab, an MRI (a type of X-ray) and a breathing test.

During this study, nothing will hurt. No needles or medicines will be used. An adult must stay with the teen overnight.

You will be paid for your time and effort. Details will be provided when you call.

This study is sponsored by the National Institutes of Health, and is being conducted at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia cuba

Fly to Havana, now legally

The Treasury Department is once again granting 'people-to-people' licenses, which expands travel opportunities for Cuba-bound visitors

For the first time since 2004, when the George W. Bush administration canceled so-called "people-to-people" licenses for companies offering cultural travel to Cuba, Americans can once again go there legally — and without applying to the U.S. Department of the Treasury for a special license. More companies are expected to receive the same license in the coming weeks, so do your research before purchasing a ticket.

Insight Cuba

Insight Cuba has just been granted a license to offer cultural tours to Cuba, and these small-group trips (limited to 16 people) are available to the general public, including Americans. According to Insight Cuba's Director Tom Popper, "We've been preparing for the possibility of again offering our Cuba programs since August 2010, when reports surfaced that President Obama was going to ease the travel restrictions." Those restrictions were lifted in mid-January, and the company's license was just approved late June.

What's included

Itineraries include all meals, admission costs and travel within the country, but they do not include tips or other extras. This is an important consideration, since U.S. credit and debit cards cannot be used in Cuba — so you'll have to carry enough cash.

What's not included

The tour costs do not include airfare to Havana, which will be done on already-established charter flights from Miami and will add about $500 to the cost of the trip. Insight Cuba has already reserved seats on these flights for tour participants, but you'll have to book your flight directly through Insight Cuba once you are confirmed on a tour.

– Go to www.fodors.com for more expert travel tips. Fodor's. For choice travel experiences.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ You now may travel to Cuba, as long as you go with a licensed organization.

The tours

The company will offer six tours. The first departures are Aug. 11. Trips, which begin at $1,695 for a four-day/three-night weekend trip (off-season), go up to $4,095 for a nine-day/eight-night "Cuban Music and Art" trip (peak season). Single supplements are modest, at $200-$300.
